

Play & Learn Teaches the Importance of Generosity

Along with learning their letters and numbers, math and science, the children at Play & Learn are taught the importance of character, community and compassion. Incorporated into the curriculum are events that teach the significance of sharing with others, giving to those less fortunate and helping each other in times of need. From the Toys for Tots Program to the Ronald McDonald House, the children at Play & Learn understand being involved in their community is essential to becoming a good citizen.

The children at Play & Learn located in Collegeville participated in the Pajama Program. The Pajama Program is a non-profit organization that was founded in 2001 with the mission to provide pajamas and books to children in need throughout the United States. The program was a success, collecting 27 pairs of pajamas and 22 books! The children learned a valuable lesson of not only giving to those less fortunate but also to appreciate the things they have.

With the help and support of all the parents, the children were thrilled to participate in this program. The center hosted a Pajama Party day, where the children wore their pajamas to school. Stories were read, pajamas and books were collected and the children experienced firsthand the satisfaction of their efforts.

Play & Learn provides early childhood education to children ages six weeks through six years.
